WORKSHOP LEADERS

NDSU faculty and graduate students in science-related fields of study are invited to develop and lead a workshop at this annual conference. Workshop leaders donate time individually or with a group of graduate students in the same academic field.

Connect with K-12 students; build your curriculum vitae, gain experience in public outreach/extension, leadership, and teamwork; and practice presenting research in an engaging and educational way.

EVENT ASSISTANTS

Another way to be involved is to volunteer as an event assistant. Event assistants help plan the event, guide participants to workshops, give directions to students, guide bus drivers to parking, and assist with conference check-in.

MORE INFORMATION:

HIGH-SCHOOL STUDENTS

You are invited to attend this fun and engaging series of hands-on workshops that introduce you to different careers in sciences. Participate in activities, pose questions to the presenters, or just come witness science in action.

There are many opportunities to meet individuals from NDSU who share your interest in these careers. We encourage you to get to know the leaders of the workshops you really enjoy because they have a wealth of knowledge about the subject.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS

School districts are welcome to bring groups of students to this event. To have your school participate, contact the event coordinators. Register your school today!

SHARING BEST PRACTICES

The Office of Teaching and Learning (OTL) is a supportive place to find assistance to improve your teaching. We continuously seek new ways to support NDSU's faculty and teaching staff because our mission is to "Create and share best practices to enhance inclusive learning and teaching." The We Learn Together Blog is one way we distribute important information to faculty and teaching staff.

The Office of Teaching and Learning and its guest bloggers research and write posts about different teaching techniques and topics that may enhance your teaching.

Interested in learning more about a specific topic? Send topic suggestions to ndsuo.tl@ndsu.edu.

WRITING FOR THE BLOG

Guest bloggers are welcome to write a blog post or a series of blog posts. We are interested in posts about all aspects of teaching from technology tidbits to finding accommodations for students with disabilities and everything in between.

Have you found success with a specific approach or methodology in your class? Share your experience by writing a short blog post about it.

If you would like to write for the NDSU Office of Teaching and Learning We Learn Together Blog, please submit your outline or writing sample to ndsuo.tl@ndsu.edu.

We know that observing each other in the classroom and discussing it with others, is a great way to become a better teacher. In this program, NDSU faculty and teaching staff get involved in those observations and discussions.

There are two available tracks.

TRACK 1: FORMAL PEER TEACHING REVIEW

You will be matched with a senior faculty member trained in formal pedagogy review. Upon completion, you will receive a formal report for promotion, tenure and evaluation (PTE) portfolios, and for career promotion purposes.

APPLY TODAY:

www.ndsu.edu/otl/programs/peer_teaching

TRACK 2: INFORMAL PEER TEACHING PARTNERSHIP

This track is an open and personalized teaching partnership between you and your peers that aims to improve individual teaching effectiveness through productive and discreet feedback.

This option can be used as an informal professional development opportunity, or you may choose to write teaching support letters for your portfolios.
