2019 Woodlands and High Plains Traditional Powwow

This year, the 30th annual Woodland and High Plains Traditional Powwow will be held at Concordia College in Moorhead, Minnesota on March 30th, 2019. This annual traditional event will celebrate the accomplishments and achievements of American Indian College graduates. During the grand entries of the event, which start at 1 pm and 7 pm, more than 250 dancers in regalia from around the tri-state area will represent various dancing styles. The event is expected to have more than 2,500 attendees throughout the day. There will be American Indian fry bread tacos, community informational booths, and commercial vendors from more than three states, who will be selling authentic American Indian crafts, jewelry, pottery and other beadwork items. Admission is free for students from NDSU, Minnesota State University Moorhead, M State and Concordia College with student ID. Children 5 and under also are admitted free. The Woodlands and High Plains Traditional Powwow is sponsored by Concordia College, Minnesota State Community and Technical College Moorhead (M State), Minnesota State University Moorhead (MSUM), and North Dakota State University (NDSU).

INBRE Webinar Series

Repeated weather constraints have made the SURP pop-up workshop difficult to host in TMCC. NDSU INBRE is now proposing a webinar series with participation from all tribal colleges throughout North Dakota. The purpose of the webinar is to highlight the types of research conducted in the NDSU MPH program and NDSU in general. Recorded series will be available for future viewing. The proposed audience will be tribal college students, faculty and staff. INBRE project manager has already started requesting faculty members at the NDSU MPH to participate in the webinar series.
